LILLIE'S LOCK OPENED IN ONE MINUTE!

New York, September 2, 1864.
F. TILLMAN, Esq., 318 Battery street, Bet. Commercial and Clay, San Francisco.
DEAR SIR: WE NOTICE AN ADVERTISEMENT in your daily paper respecting the "security" of the "Lillie" lock. We are aware that you will understand this lock, and, of course, will not allow yourself to be annoyed by such representations. We have just sent for one of our men at the factory, and he, in our presence, opened one of Lillie's best safe locks, after it had been locked and the combination turned on.
By one Blow of the Hammer
Against the knob on the outside, and thereby breaking the cast iron bolt on the inside.
The whole time occupied in opening the lock, about ONE MINUTE. We send you this lock, that your friends may not be deceived by false representations, etc.
Respectfully,
A. E. TILTON,
WM. McFARLAND.

NO PRACTICAL Lock Picker or Thimble-rigger Required to OPERATE THE SAID LILLIE LOCK.

Any parties desirous of seeing the above mentioned lock, its insecurity and easy mode of opening the same, can call at 318 Battery street, San Francisco.
GROVER & McFARLAND, March 26, 1865.
Messrs. TILTON & McFARLAND, Boston, Mass.
Gentlemen: From representations made by Mr. Lillie, I was induced to purchase one of his

So-called "Fire Proof Safes."

On the 10th of February last, a fire occurred in our block which destroyed a number of buildings, and our own with the rest. We trusted our books, papers and all in the safe. After the fire the so-called "safe" was taken from the ruins, and on opening it we found that Everything was Destroyed.

We send you the safe, with what is left of the papers, and you will see that not one of them is legible or strong enough to sustain its own weight. Having the curiosity to know how our neighbors fared in this fire, we noticed McFARLAND & Hardy just opening their safe (TILTON & McFARLAND's make), and its contents were found to be

In Perfect Condition.

This led us to further investigation, and we found to our astonishment that from the large amount of combustible material in Messrs. M. & H.'s cellar—such as coal, pork, etc.—their safe was subjected to a much greater heat than that of our own, we being in the clothing business and had but little in the cellar. There was another of Lillie's safes here subjected to the same fire, however, no better than our own.

Very respectfully,
Your obedient servants,
GEO. L. CHESBRO & CO.

TILTON & McFARLAND'S SAFE! THE ONLY PROTECTION Against Fire and Burglars.

For the last Fifteen Years
This safe has been well known in California and the Eastern States. They have resisted all the fires on the Pacific coast, and we can point with satisfaction to the record that

No man ever lost a dollar out of one of our safes by means of burglars. Their fire and burglar proof qualities are so well known that they need no further recommendation.

A good assortment of Tilton & McFarland's Fire and Burglar Proof Safes to be had at
No. 318 Battery street, San Francisco.

THE HUMAN HAIR

HAS LONG BEEN THE STUDY OF THE most scientific men of the age, from the fact that close study generally causes the hair to fall off prematurely; and, in consequence, they have given the subject a portion of their valuable time, trying to invent some method to retain their lost locks; but all their labor was in vain, until after many years of hard study devoted to this one subject, has produced an article that

PROFESSOR CROCKETT

WILL MAKE THE HAIR GROW.

and which, by its use as a Hair Dressing, will effectually and always prevent its loss—even to extreme old age. Happily, the while possessing these virtues, is most delicate and agreeable without regard to its virtue. The hair, when diseased, becomes dry, and commences to turn gray, which is caused by the non-secretion by the capillary glands of a peculiar oil. It has been thought and believed that if the glands were stimulated into action, they would still give a sufficient supply of nourishment to the hair; but alas! they forgot one very important law of nature, viz: that all stimulants have a reaction; the more the glands were stimulated, the sooner the final loss of the much prized locks. The principle of the preparation invented by Professor Crockett is entirely the opposite—instead of stimulating the capillary glands, he feeds them with the substance they require, and, in turn, the hair is fed by them—the same principle as giving water to a flower. All we will say to those who are timid about trying new preparations is, that we strictly guarantee the AMYGDALINE to be entirely free from all stimulants, and is as harmless as filtered water, and can be used on the smallest infant. As a

AMYGDALINE

Hair Dressing

it is unequalled by any the world has yet produced. It keeps the head entirely free of dandruff, eczema, pimples—imparting to the hair a beautiful glossy softness not obtainable by any known compound. It will also be found both pleasant and useful as a Cosmetic, keeping cool and cream and face lotions in its folds; for chaps, sore breast and nipples we know of no remedy that is equal to it.

used is such that the AMYGDALINE will always retain, it will not become rancid by age; in fact, it is perfect in every particular. Professor Crockett's Amygdaline can be had of all druggists and dealers everywhere. Price 50 cents.

Ask for Crockett's Amygdaline, and take no others. 25-6m

(Written for the Enquirer.) A TRUE STORY.

BY JULIA P. MANNING.

Mrs. Sanders was the first to speak. She whispered, "See Elliott; he says he isn't Emily's son, and that you are father's. He wants Mary; he told me so yesterday. Go away now—and, dear John, believe me, I never meant to fool Andrew or vex poor Lizzy. I thought it would be such fun to make them jealous; and, besides, I wanted to make you fearful that I too might change. Go, now, and don't come again, for as (pointing over her shoulder) is treacherous and deep, and he hates you. Oh, go!"

Good bye, Ellen; I forgive you, and pray that all good angels may guard you and yours," and John Justice left the house of the woman he had loved, and hated, and despised, but whom he now sincerely pitied.

Ellen sat still a few moments, listening intently, expecting her husband, but she was disappointed. An hour elapsed, when she determined to see him before he left, and once more to act the wife. She went to the nursery—her child was not there, and she supposed the nurse had gone out with him. She next sought her husband in the library—he was not there, but on the table she saw a small note, directed to herself. She opened it trembling, and read the following:

"ELLEN—I take Gertrude and Albert with me. Enclose you will find a draft for $2,000. However, etc., are sold. John Justice will see to you. Change of occupation and scene will do you good. There is no use in grieving or trying to follow, for my plans are too well laid to give you a shadow of hope. My first wife may call upon you; so, you can console yourselves. Henry Elliott will have your property ere long, as your own's her. Good bye. W.S."

Such was the cruel epistle left for her by her child's father. A feverish glow of excitement gave way to deadly paleness, a shudder convulsed her frame, and she fell as one lifeless upon the floor. When she returned to consciousness she found a stranger anxiously bending over her, and her own maid assisting to relieve her of some of her outer garments. "My boy," she sobbed, "my pretty boy! Oh, my babe, where are you?" Once more her eyes closed, and again she was lost to consciousness. The family physician was quickly sent for, and the strange lady, whom we will call Mrs. Audrey, much to the maid's surprise, declared very coolly that she would take care of the poor young lady.

When the physician arrived he pronounced her dangerously ill, and calling Jeannette, her maid, into the parlor, said to her, "Girl, what has happened? Who is that strange woman? Where is your master?"

"Dear sir, I must say that I don't know anything. That lady called; my master and the nurse went out airing; guess my mistress had visitors. Mr. John, you know, I asked nurse where they were going, and she said 'Out airing.' I sent the lady into the reception room, and went to find my mistress in the library. I found her in a dead faint; I screamed out, and the strange lady ran and helped me to raise her. She gave me some bit of paper what was clutched in her poor hand. Says she to me, 'Guess I'll keep that till she recovers.' That's every bit I know."

The old doctor walked rapidly up and down, muttering, "Sanders gone—she deserted—this devil here! I must get John's clear head, and send for Mary. Poor girl, poor girl! I must try and fight on this woman into decency if I can't shame her. He pulled the bell; the door opened, admitting Mr. Audrey, who bowed to the doctor. When the latter had retired, the lady advanced with a smile, said, "Doctor, a shy fox is not easily fooled. Unless extreme measures become necessary I will not harm you; but I will have my rights acknowledged—so nicely arranged, too, in my runaway husband's own writing. Just see. Hold! I read it to you."

The doctor, with a brow like midnight, replied, "Madam, you may be his first wife or twice, but, for that matter, but, by the God above us, if you intrude upon, or annoy that poor childless mother up stairs, I'll make you shed tears of blood. I know you, thoroughly, and I have you in my power. You pale! Be well. Be warned. Leave the house this instant, and at a further distance, and I will have the crisis. Refuse, and Jane Selby shall be avenged! Oh, you understand me, I see. That's better; then turning to a servant, who had just entered, the doctor said, 'Show this lady to her carriage; she is in haste. If it should have gone, call one for her. Good morning, madam!'"

"As I recollect, my dear Doctor," was her laughing reply.

"That woman is a devil!" mused the doctor. "I must play her with her own cards. But now to that poor child. He hastened to Ellen's bedside, whom he found pale, calm and conscious. When she saw him she held out her hand, saying, softly, 'My mother's boy, help me; I have no friend; I told me so in my note. That woman has it—who is she? Is she—oh, God, why can't I die! Doctor, listen; I swear to follow him to the ends of the earth, for I will have vengeance!'"

"Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord," interrupted the old doctor, solemnly. My poor girl, listen and take my advice. Come home with me; leave all in your lawyer's hands; he is an honest though rough man, and we will search cautiously as well as advertisement. I'll send for Mary."

"A letter, madam," and the servant handed it to Jeannette, who frowned at Godfrey's putting his proboscis inside of her mistress's room, and continued, "The man says there is to be an answer."

The doctor watched the nervous twitching of the poor sufferer, and taking the letter from her, said, "Let me see what this is about, my dear Mrs. Sanders."

"Oh, not that name; not—"

"Hush, Ellen, you forget yourself," and looking at Godfrey, gave him a nod to leave, a hint that the servant was not long in obeying.

Opening the letter, he found it was from Mary. He read, saying to himself, as he was ill and had something of importance to say to her.

"What is it, Doctor?"

"My dear, your sister is not well, and wants to see you; that is all. I will call on my way home, and tell her I will visit you over as soon as possible. And now let Jeannette get your things, for home with you must come. No devil. In your dead mother's name, I command you: this is no place for you. I will send for Justice, too; he is clear-headed, and, as Mrs. Sanders is pretty well; so does the person, and we must soon let him through I know that Sanders would not tell him anything. I'm going down stairs; that woman is gone, and I'm in a hurry; so, Jeannette, be quick! After the doctor had left the room, Ellen sat up in the bed, pale and stern; not a tear escaped her weary eye-lids. She sat up, allowed Jeannette to dress her, sent for her desk and her boy's playthings and clothes. All were taken. Again both looked, and a little while, a tiny red shoe and a whistle were found behind a trunk. The poor mother gazed at them with dry, feverish eyes, put them in her pocket, and then, with clenched teeth, walked over to a portrait of her husband, took it down, stamped upon it, and then threw the fragments into the fire.

"Thus perish all thought of any sacred tie; but vengeance, oh, vengeance I will have!" Jeannette was busy packing in a bewildered manner, when Ellen called her. "Jeannette, call me Mrs. D'Arcy; I have no husband; he stole my boy; collect all my clothes and jewelry, and send up Mrs. Day."

In a few moments a lady, fat, fair and forty, appeared, dressed in rustling black silk, with faultlessly white collar and cuffs. "I hope you feel better, Mrs. Sanders."

"Mrs. Day, I sent for you. I'm leaving with Dr. Mann. Make up your accounts. Mr. Herbert, my lawyer, will pay off all debts. Bid these servants good bye for me. Mr. Sanders has left, and carried off Albert. Good bye; I thank you for your attention. And now, if you please, tell Godfrey that I want him."

Mrs. Day, looking as though she thought somebody was crazy, retired, leaving Ellen with a bright spot on either cheek, and a wild look which boded fever to no slight degree.

"I know I'm going to be sick, but I'll play game, for of course the villain has his spies here. Ah, Godfrey, come here."

"Miss Ellen, child, you're sick; go to bed, and don't be acting like a mad woman."

"Godfrey, dear old Godfrey, do you love me?"

"Do I! indeed I do; and your mother before you."

"Well, old friend, that man had a wife before he married me; she's here now, and he has taken my beautiful boy. Oh, Godfrey, I want my darling, pretty boy; won't you help me?"

"I'll do it at once, if at a moment, then, receding, fell at her feet. She gave one piercing shriek, which soon brought the doctor and servants. Jeannette sent most of the letter to the right about, and raising the faithful old man would have helped him also, had not Mrs. Sanders declared that he should be placed on her bed. The doctor tried to remove her for a time, but she stoutly resisted, declaring that she would not stir until Godfrey had recovered. It was some time before he returned to consciousness.

"Ellen, you must leave while I examine the poor child," the doctor said; "wait in the dressing room until I come to you. We must not waste time. Jeannette, see to your mistress's, and the doctor turned to give his attention to the patient. Mrs. Sanders left the room, followed by her maid, who seemed to be half crazed by the events of the day. Ellen said, "Jeannette, you may retire; I wish to be alone. I'll ring when I want you."

"As soon as the maid had gone, Ellen went to her husband's desk, but found nothing of consequence. As she was closing it she touched a spring, which opened a secret compartment, revealing forth by woman, splendid and polite. Eagerly tearing the ribbon which bound the papers, she unfolded one after the other, but found them to have been apparently written by some of her tenants. The miniature and ring were next examined, but she could make nothing of them. How could she! The ring was a diamond set for her examination. She looked around her boudoir; the carpet seemed like one soft cluster of roses; the atmosphere laden with their perfume; the luxurious sofa, the chaise longue, the broad mirror reaching from ceiling to floor, all these magnificent surroundings, I remember, I remember, I remember. I was here, I was here, I was here. Why had she been taken? why did Sanders act thus? All this was the thought of a moment. She sank on her knees, and placing her throbbing brow on the sofa, prayed, "God help me!" and taking her boy's shoe from her pocket, placed it by her cheek. "No fear, no sigh, my grown-up child," she arose in a few moments, and there was a something fearfully stern and determined in her young face which few could look upon unmoved, and certainly not Doctor Mann, her mother's life-long playmate, lover and friend. He came gently up to her, and placing his hand on her head, said, "Mrs. Sanders, Godfrey is with his Maker. He left a parcel for you, which I hold; but you must promise first to be calm, and come home with me for a few days, before I give it to you. My wife is waiting to hear, and placing his hand on her head, said, "Mrs. Sanders, Godfrey is with his Maker. DUTCH FLAT ENQUIRER.

VALUABLE OIL LAND.—"Mr. Skits, an eminent Analytical Chemist," submits the following report to the Secretary of a new Petroleum Oil Company:

The mining corps, under the direction of Professor Kratzsch, first penetrated the earth at eighteen points by means of Artesian wells. This examination developed the existence of petroleum in incredible quantities. No less than 400,000 barrels per day is assured of. I tasted the oil myself. It will make an excellent salad oil, and with little difficulty may be prepared for use on the hair. For lubricating purposes it is incomparable, and it is highly esteemed for wounds in battle, and all other cases of a ganglionic or epigastrian nature. I have no hesitation in saying that these wells are the richest in the world, and of which we are informed. A man living in the neighborhood informs me that he has been sick for ninety odd years, and has always used petroleum oil upon his cart-wheels. Such is the inexhaustible nature of the field, that an aqueduct might be built for a very small sum to carry the oil direct to New York or Europe. An artificial fountain and lake of oil might be formed in the vicinity, or an oil canal constructed to float the barrels upon. The oil also yields a variety of excellent perfumes, such as new mown hay, jockey club, jessamine, west end, etc. It is an invaluable substitute for butter, and has been known to fry eggs to a delicious brown before the animals had done wriggling. Its paraffinous nature makes it go well with pastry. It makes puddings at sea, and pice on shore. In addition to this it contains a large residuum of gold.

The following analysis shows the incredible richness of this oil:

Benzole.....	1
Chloride of Sodium.....	15
Pure Petroleum.....	1
Orange Co. butter.....	11
Hair oil, in bottles.....	6
Gold coin.....	2
Paraffine candle.....	2
Calves-foot jelly.....	2

Paris, 100
Many samples are richer. I possess one which yields two gallons of hair-oil and one pound of butter to the gallon of petroleum. In boring for the oil a fine vein of pure wine was struck. This might be bottled and sent to market. It is supposed to be over 300,000 years old, and must be good. There is also promise of striking a large subterranean mine of sardines. Preserved in oil, these fish must be delicious.

Besides the above advantages, there are not wanting indications of a fertile yield of quinine, which, while the war lasts, must bring a large revenue to the company. Quinine baths might be constructed, and the quinine itself conducted to the various government hospitals by pipes. I have the honor to be, dear Sir,
Your obedient servant,
OILY GAMMON,
Analytical and Consulting Chemist.

GENERAL SHERMAN has a very terse way of disposing of the mooted question of aggression. To a proud lady who said to him: "General, you may conquer, but you can't subjugate us," he instantly replied, "I don't want to subjugate you, I mean to kill you, the whole of you. If you don't stop this rebellion." To another who wanted to know of him how long the war would last, he said, "Well, Well," in his rapid, earnest manner, "I don't know; perhaps six or eight years, and then twenty or twenty-five years of guerrilla warfare; long enough to destroy this whole generation and then we'll begin again." In this way he dashes their arrogance, right and left, to the winds, and they leave his presence utterly confounded, and at least, with due respect to the Yankee General.

A GENEROUS ACT.—On Saturday night last, after it was found useless to attempt to put out the fire in the Cohorn House, some of our citizens informed Mr. Edwards, the owner of the butcher shop, that they could save Kaulbach's store by tearing down his building. Mr. E. immediately replied: "If you can save Charles's store by tearing down my shop, I want you to do it; and the sooner you commence the better; and the building was demolished, at a loss to Mr. E., of about $1,000.—Quincy Union.

It is cheering to chronicle such acts of generous kindness. They disclose a gushing oasis in the weary desert of life's pilgrimage.

THEY are digging for gold in Rome. A certain man discovered in an old MS a direction to dig from the Coliseum so many feet and find a square stone; forty palms below that a trench; along that trench to the centre of the Coliseum, to an aqueduct containing twenty millions of scudi. He dug. He found the stone. He found the trench. He is still clearing the dirt out of the latter, agreeing to give half of all he finds to the government. All Rome is watching him and is terribly excited.

OREGON sends a fresh backwoodsman to Congress, who had never seen a railroad till he came on this season. He had heard much of the tricks of sharpers, and was determined to keep his eyes open. He kept them open so wide that when the conductor came and tore off the coupon of his car ticket, he seized that worthy officer by the throat and had nearly made an end of him before he could be persuaded that no wrong had been done.

MIND YOUR STOPS.—A clergyman was lately depicting before a deeply interested audience the alarming increase of intemperance, when he astonished his hearers by exclaiming, "a young woman in my neighborhood died very suddenly last Sabbath, while I was preaching the 'gospel in a state of beastly intoxication!'"

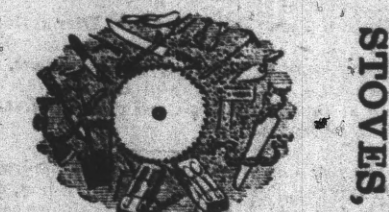

THREE infants born in Napa on Washington's birthday anniversary have been named "George Washington," "Charleston," and "Columbia."

FOUR years of war have equipped America from head to foot in armor, have placed new and terrible weapons in her hand, and made her appear to the world like a new Rome, or like France in the great days of Napoleon.

DR. HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS—Should be in the possession of everybody in the mining region. As a preventive of various dangerous diseases to which the gold seeker is liable, it has no superior. While it is quite palatable even as a beverage, it is speedy and powerful in its effects upon the system. In all cases of diarrhoea, dysentery, and the prevailing fevers consequent upon exposure, the bitters will be found invaluable as a corrective. No man should enter upon the exposed camp life of a miner without being provided with Hostetter's Preventive of stomach disease, nor should any of those who are now engaged in the occupation fail to have recourse to the Bitters. Sold by all druggists and dealers everywhere.

HOSTETTER, SMITH & DEAN,

Hope for the Afflicted.—In another part of this paper will be found the advertisement of the celebrated Institute established by Dr. J. C. Young, in 1850. In this age of deceit and charlatanism it is a boon to the suffering to point out to them where they are sure of obtaining the wished for relief and cure. Under the care of the skillful Doctor the sick and troubled can divest themselves of their burdens of pain; lay aside their cross, and secure health and happiness. If you are sick or in trouble, do not hesitate. Read the advertisement and follow the advice. Do not forget the number nor the manner of directing your letter. That iron well galvanized will not rust; that a simple machine will do the work of a score; that a writer should be self-adjusting and efficient; that thumb-screws and fastenings cause delay and trouble to regulate and keep in order; if at wood soaked in water, it will rot; if a man's feet are not shod with proper things for a shaft to run in, they will wear out; the best man, a Winger, with or without cog-wheels, will not cover the clothes; that cog-wheel regulators are not essential, that the Putnam Winger has all the advantages of a cog-wheel, and is the best of all things named; that all who have tested it, pronounce it the best Winger ever made; that it will bring a Thread or a Bed Quilt without alteration.

New York, Jan. 1864. No. 100 Beekman str.

We have tested Putnam's Wringer by practical working and know it to be what it is. It is cheap; it is simple; it requires no room, whether at work on at rest; a child can operate it; it does its duty through out; it saves time and it saves wear and tear. We earnestly advise all who have much washing to do, with all intelligent persons who have any, to buy this Wringer. It will pay for itself in a year at most.

INVENTORS, MECHANICS, AGRICULTURISTS,

Are directed to the annual prospectus of the cheapest and best Mechanical Journal in the world.

The Illustrated Scientific American.

A New Volume of which commences Jan. 1, 1865.

THIS VALUABLE JOURNAL HAS BEEN published nineteen years, and during all this time it has been the firm and steady advocate of the Inventor, Mechanic, Manufacturer, and Farmer, and the true and honest defender of the progress of Art, Science and Industry.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is the largest, the only reliable, and most widely circulated journal of the kind now published in the United States. It has witnessed the growth of nearly all the great inventions and discoveries of the day, most of which have been illustrated and described in its columns. It also contains a Weekly Official List of all the Patent Claims, a feature of great value to all Inventors and Patentees.

In the Mechanical Department, a full account of all improvements in Machinery will be given. Also, a full description upon the various Tools used in workshops and manufactories.

Steam and Mechanical Engineering will continue to receive careful attention, and all experiments and practical results attained will be fully reported.

Woolen, Cotton and other Manufacturing interests will have special attention. Also, Fire-

Arms, War Implements, Ordnance, War Vessels, Railway—anchovy, Mechanic's Tools, Electric, Chemical and Mathematical Apparatus, Wood and Iron Machinery, Agricultural Implements, Water wheels, &c.; Household and FARM IMPLEMENTS—the latter department being very full and of great value to Farmers and Gardeners. A large embracing every department of Popular science, which everybody understands.

Decisions and Discussions will here, too, form a prominent feature. Owing to the very large experience of the publishers, Messrs. Lusk & Co., as Solicitors of Patents, this department of the paper will possess great interest to Patentees and inventors.

The year's numbers contain a total hundred sub-arrangements; also reliable practical recipes, useful in every shop and household. Two volumes each year, 16 pages—total, 322 pages.

Terms:—$3 per year: $1.50 for six months; Specimen Copies FREE.
